Dancing Academies.

Dancing Academics.

A DODWORTH'S DANCING ACADEMIES, No. 366 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK, No. 157 MONTAGUE PLACE, BROOKLYN.

Classes will commence first Week in October, or immediately after Mr. Dodworth's return from Europe.

Mr. DODWORTH would take occasion to say that he has long felt the necessity of introducing a system of instruction for the use of the younger pupils by which the exercise of Dancing would be of more benefit physically, and more useful in the development of graceful movement, than it has been of late years. The facility with which the Poiks and similar dances of the present time are acquired has induced many to noglect the present time. For acquired has induced many to noglect the present time are acquired has induced many to noglect the commentation. They are sent to school, and allowed to scoop over their decks without intermediate exercise, until the growing frame assumes the pesition in which it has so long been restrained; they are then sent to a teacher of dancing, with the expectation that by learning the Polks, Schottisch and a few other dances all this would be remedied, and they would at once become graceful women. Surely these things should be better understood. Were children sent to dancing arrly in life, at intervals during their recessary studies, and the teacher ollowed to exceeds them in such a manner and in such dances, in addition to the fashionable ones, as would add grace to the figure, walk and every invorment, then something would be gained ensistent with the true object of this valuable accomplishment. Anxions to restore the set to its former usefulness, Mr. Dodworth instructed his classes in that acknowledged graceful study, the Minnet de la Cour, and other dances of similar usefulness. The evedent success of this course in its effect upon the pupils encouraged him to give more attention to Dancing as connected with Calesthenics; and during his present tour through Germany, France and Great Britain it will be his business to call upon the most prominent teachers, and consult
